Plane crash in remote area – survival and morality

- Access to resources : the first step in managing the resources among survivor is to analyzing everyone's condition like their mental and physical condition and then analyzing how much they need to survive till further help , like take an example if a man is heavily injured and needs more resources then it will be an best option to give him more resources to rescuing him from his injury and in other example if a man is totally fine then it will be fine if we provide him less resources because he have ability to survive in less resources also and while doing this we need to acknowledge the types of resources also like different kind of resources meds, foods, clothes, water etc.
- Deciding the leadership and survival strategy : as we've got crashed in remote mountain area it is always best to see if there is anyone from the survivors who have experience to face the harsh mountains environment . and have basic or proper information about this area if there is no one it is best to see if there is anyone who can lead us in the best possible way. The leader will be decided by based on these conditions and he will lead us to get in a safe place .
